The Song.

LUX IN TENEBRIS.

Can the dead birds ever waken
To the life of song once more?
As they did in days of yer?
An they did in days of yer?
Can the soil winds ever fold so
Where so chilling storms may blight?
Can the soft shillow are hold as
Safely from the threatening night?

An ine Hearen far away?

Ay I yee; for cough
Die with all the passing boars,
While the jeyous winds of gladnes
Cell to life the haried flowers.
Though the still hands lie so humb
On a door one's pinicless breast,
Billi our licavan watches dumbly
O'er the precious, dreamless rest.
